To Cure Constipation Forever.
Take Cascarets Candy Cathartic, 10c. or 25c. If C. C. C. fail to cure, druggists refund money

A bad man never fits a good place.

Quitting coughing is easy enough if you know how to do it. The best way to quit is to take one dose of Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey. Summer coughs, lung coughs, winter coughs, bronchial coughs or any kind of a cough or cold is speedily cured by the use of this remedy. Children love it. Old people like it.

A large force of workmen is busy excavating for the foundation of the Lexington brewery.

That hacking cough is undermining your constitution—sapping your strength. Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey will cure it. This is one of the most valuable remedies of modern times for coughs, colds and bronchial troubles.

Jack Chinn is a probable candidate for Congress in the Eighth district next year.

The boy who never tries to do anything but his duty usually succeeds in all his undertakings.

The three-year old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros., of this place; and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

No day is lost that has in it one good deed or one kind word for the help of others.

NEGRO COOPERATION.

The Experiment Now Being Tried in Tennessee

A hollow wear and foundry company, organized and operated exclusively by negroes, is an experiment about to be launched in Chattanooga to test the capability of the negro for management of his own affairs. The company is organized on the cooperative idea, and each man is to give to the business so much of his time. The plant, when completed, will make stoves especially, but is designed to do all kinds of foundry work. The main foundry building is 100x25 feet, with a number of outbuildings and annexes. These buildings have been completed by the stockholders working at nights and at odd times so as not to interfere with their work on the outside, each one of them having a job with one or the other foundry establishments in Chattanooga. The buildings were erected from second-hand material, bought here and there in job lots. The cupola is new, and cost about $200. They have acquired by industry and hard work engines, boilers, molds and all needed lesser tools. They expect to make about 15 stoves a day, and they already have promises of orders sufficient to give them a start. The plant will give employment to about 50 negroes when running full time. In addition to making stoves they expect a good business doing piece work for the other foundries and iron works about the city, as they will be able to work cheaper than any other concern in the city.

The men back of this enterprise are all hard-working, sober and industrious, and deserve and are receiving the greatest encouragement and consideration from the whites of Chattanooga. The idea of building and operating the foundry originated with the president, C. H. Ferran, who is a mulatto, formerly a slave, belonging to an old and wealthy Alabama family. He was the plantation blacksmith, a man of colossal frame and a model of manly physique. Until recently he was employed as head molder at the Citico furnace of the Boone Iron company. He worked all day at Citico and walked home in the evening, a distance of two miles, and worked half the night on the buildings of his foundry.

The company has not borrowed a cent of money, and it starts entirely clear of debt, and Ferran says it will never owe a cent of money it can't pay by check at any time. There are five men like Ferran in the company, but none with his intelligence and knowledge. The plant has been paid for by the savings of these gritty men out of small wages.

The result will be watched with the greatest interest, as it is believed that if the enterprise proves successful the race question in the south will be in large measure settled. The dignity of skilled labor will do more for the negro than all the political nostrums in the world. As soon as he finds that, as a race, he can be independent, then he will begin to look to himself and not to the white man altogether, and then he will gain self-respect, something he has to a very indifferent degree now.—Philadelphia Press.

PLAGIARISM.

Good Story Told of a Preacher Who Used Others' Ideas.

Rev. Dr. B— was what is termed a "popular preacher." He did not, however, gain his success by drawing on his own stores, but rather by appropriating the thoughts and language of other preachers to his own use, and by skillfully splicing the passages so as to make a whole. Unfortunately for the doctor, his literary larcenies were one Sunday openly exposed by a grave old gentleman who had seated himself close to the pulpit and was listening with profound attention. Dr. B— had scarcely finished his third sentence before the old gentleman said, in a voice loud enough to be heard by those near him: "That's Sherlock." The doctor frowned, but went on. He had made but little progress when his grave auditor again broke out with: "That's Tillotson." The doctor bit his lips and paused, but again went on. At a third exclamation: "That's Blair," the doctor lost all patience, and, leaning over the side of the pulpit, exclaimed: "If you do not hold your tongue, sir, you shall be turned out." The old cynic, looking the doctor full in the face, retorted: "That's your own."—Baptist Union.

Crocodile as a Benefactor.
The crocodile is about to appear in a new role, that of a benefactor of society. A learned chemist, M. Metchnikof, at a meeting of a scientific society, announced that whereas bacilli exert an influence upon toxins can be lessened or destroyed them, these latter can be converted into anti-toxins only by means of certain vertebrates. Among these the crocodile stands at the head for his special office, and through his agency the toxin of tetanus is rapidly transformed into an anti-toxin. It is nevertheless difficult to imagine of what practical value this information can be.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

A DIPLOMATIC COSTUME.

Elegant Gown Sent from Paris for a Washington Matron.

A Washington woman, in the new diplomatic set, has just received from Paris a cloth dress which is pronounced one of the most elegant gowns ever seen at the capital.

The material is of light grayish heliotrope ladies' cloth, cut in a style that suggests a polonaise. The yoke is of white satin, honeycombed with gilt braids, put on by hand. This gives a very elegant finish to the waist. All around the yoke and the bottom of the skirt are scallops, around which there is a border of blue fox fur. The girdle, the muff, the collar and the bow upon the skirt are made of gray velvet, several shades darker than the dress.

There is a delicate steel tracery upon the bodice next to the fur, and the buttons and the buckle upon the bow and the muff are also of steel.

This is one of the most expensive dresses ever imported, and it will create a sensation in Washington.

A SCHOOL APRON.

It is a Great Improvement Upon the Familiar Style.

The "orphan asylum" apron, though a pretty one, is superseded this year by something that is very much like it yet a little more stylish in cut. The regular orphan asylum apron is strapped over the shoulder and is shirred across the front and back like a Mother Hubbard wrapper.

But the apron that is taking its place has a yoke of Hamburg insertion front and back. The skirt of the apron is sewed upon a broad band which buttons at one side under a board ruffle of Hamburg edging. The ruffle goes over the shoulders and extends across the yoke.

The material of the apron may be muslin of nainsook. All sorts of delicate colors are used in these aprons, and small dotted patterns are also in style. White with purple dots, cream color with red dots, and other delicate designs are in favor. White is not as popular as tints.

This apron also makes a pretty one for the afternoon sport.

Standards of Color.

The question of the selection of proper standards for the comparison of colors is being discussed in some of the scientific journals, and the variety of the suggestions made shows how really difficult is the apparently simple matter of defining and representing the color of any object. It has been proposed, for instance, to take an orange as a type of the color that bears the name of that fruit, and similarly with "olive" and "lemon." Another suggestion is that a collection of vines be employed as standard colors, and that variety of shades produced by mixing the wines! The spectrum of sunlight furnishes a standard of reference where it can be made use of, but inks and pigments employed to imitate the spectral colors are liable to considerable change and variation through fading and other causes.—Youth's Companion.

SELF-FLATTERY.

One of the Unconscious Tendencies of Human Nature.

The tendency to make our own tastes the standard and our own characters the normal types of soundness and strength is both general and deep. Most of us are probably unaware of the extent to which we unconsciously flatter ourselves by giving prominence to our particular way of meeting events and dealing with them. Absolute honesty with ourselves is a very rare virtue; most of us shield ourselves from clear, uncompromising, relentless truth. It is sometimes both pathetic and amusing to hear the entirely unconscious expressions of conceit which come from the lips of those who have no thought of betraying their own self-satisfaction. This vein of conceit, as a rule, through all our comment upon other people; as we sagely reflect on their habits, manners and characteristics, we continually pay inferential compliments to ourselves. If we say of a neighbor that he has great tact and skill in dealing with people, that he avoids collisions and secures his ends by pervading friendliness and courtesy, we are quite likely to add: "I can't do things that way. I have to speak out and let people know precisely what I think;" the inference being, of course, that there is a kind of heroic truthfulness in us which our neighbor lacks. It is suggestive to note that the man who lays this particular balm to his heart is very often the kind of man who is always stirring up useless and foolish animosity by lack of courtesy and consideration. The man who delights to call himself plain and blunt is often called by his neighbors discourteous and rude; and his neighbors are very often sound in their judgment. The possession of tact does not imply the faintest touch of insincerity, and the man who "always speaks his mind" is often very offensive, without possessing any superior sense of truthfulness. A very emotional person is likely to credit herself with unusual sensitiveness, when she may be conspicuously lacking in that somewhat unusual quality; and a very calm person is prone to speak of her feelings as quiet but deep. Thus we fall into the habit of flattering ourselves at the expense of those who differ from us, and we need to set a watch upon ourselves. A trained ear will detect a false note in the voice; a clear intelligence will protect us even from unconscious conceit.—N. Y. Outlook.

THE LITTLE RED BOOTS.

Boyhood Reminiscence of a Prominent Lawyer—His Great Grief.

"I'm almost 60 years old," remarked a prominent lawyer, "but I can never look at a pair of little red-topped boots without a pang. When I was probably six years old we lived in a little country town, through which a small river ran, crossed by bridges. One Saturday my father, who was in the main a kind man, but had a violent temper, took me to an adjoining larger town to see a circus. We had a fine time, and after the circus he bought me a pair of little red-topped boots, and we walked home. I carried the precious boots, one in each hand, admiring them, every step of the way. When we crossed the bridge, to my great consternation, I let one of the new boots fall into the water. It went floating down stream at a great rate. My father evidently thought it could not be recovered. At any rate he walked me home at a rapid gait, gave me a good thrashing and put the other boot in the open wood fire. You can imagine with what heartbreak I saw it turn to ashes. In the morning in came a boatman, bringing my lost boot, which he had found among the weeds at the river's edge. Of course, my grief broke out afresh—my father's wrath broke out afresh also. He was eyeing me as if he intended to give me another whipping because the man had found the boot, I suppose, when my grandmother jumped into the breach, carried me off into her bedroom and gave me some dejected peppermint candy out of an old stand drawer. Since that time I have had griefs and have lost valuables; but that awful tragedy of the little red boots has not been obliterated or even perceptibly dimmed in poignancy."—Indianapolis Journal.

Ant Life.

M. Forel, in his excellent work on ants, has pointed out that very young ants devote themselves at first to the care of the larvae and pupae, and that they take no share in the defense of the nest or other out-of-door work until they are some days old. This seems natural because their first skin is comparatively soft; and it would not be well for them to undertake rough work or run into danger until their armor had time to harden.

Still Superstitious.

It is gravely asserted that when it was informed that the sailing date of a popular ocean steamer from Boston was set for Friday many persons who had wished to go to Europe in her refused to book passage for that particular trip and the date was changed to Saturday.

In New York a short while ago a baby was born in jail. Its mother was being tried for murder. Every woman's heart gives a throb of sympathy at the thought of the blight upon the poor little baby's life. But a baby need not be born in jail to be unfortunate. Any baby which is not welcomed into this world with loving hearts and ready hands is unfortunate. Any mother who is physically weak and incapable of bestowing a healthy constitution upon her baby may darken its future with weakness and disease.

A prospective mother ought to insure her baby's welfare by every means that Nature and science afford to keep her physical powers up to the very highest point.

Every expectant mother ought to know and avail herself of the strengthening and re-enforcing properties of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives health and endurance to the delicate organs concerned in motherhood. Taken early during the period of expectancy, it makes the coming of baby perfectly safe and comparatively easy. It makes the mother strong and cheerful, and gives health and natural vigor to the child.

It is the only medicine of its kind devised for weak and delicate women by an educated, experienced physician.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. His thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" contains advice and suggestions which every woman ought to read. A paper-bound copy will be sent absolutely free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. Cloth-bound for 31 stamps.

A sure and permanent cure for constipation is Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic.
